A total of 1,221 fatal railroad-related work injuries occurred from 1993 through 2002. Fatalities involving railroading workers accounted for less than two-fifths of the 1,221 fatal railroad-related work injuries. Railroad-related fatalities involving nonrailroading workers, such as workers in rail transportation occupations outside railroading or truckdrivers in other industries who are fatally injured in at-grade crossing collisions with trains, accounted for more than three-fifths of railroad-related work fatalities. Previous Chart
