

Publication Media- Schedule 76 FAQs

1. What types of offerings are included on Schedule 76?

Offerings include online and hard copy periodicals, books, desk references, professional journal and technical publication subscription services. Broadcast and multi-media entertainment services covering news, business trends, consumer reporting and cable updates are offered, along with mailing list, virtual library maintenance and advanced search linking for military, business, security, technical or intelligence applications.

2. What types of publications are included in Schedule 76?

Schedule 76 covers a wide spectrum of publications including professional journals, books, pamphlets, magazines, newspapers and databases.

3. Where can I find professional services in support of the publishing of print and electronically published media?

SIN 760 3 covers professional services including editing, writing, proofreading and fact checking along with archiving and library management services. These services can be prepared in virtually any format.

4. What green services are available under Schedule 76?

In support of GSA's commitment to green service offerings, many publications have gone digital. The contractors on schedule offer e-publishing, digital workflow solutions, on demand publishing and online bookselling services. These green services reduce the need for print publishing and therefore encourage sustaining green efforts.

5. Where can I get broadcast and multi-media programming, news and information media delivered in a variety of modes?

This information is available under SIN 760 6 along with home video, games and simulation products with educational and entertainment content. In addition, subscriptions to satellite delivered news services such as CNN can be found here.

6. Where can I get an on-going annual subscription to laws passed every year in the federal government and every state?

This service can be found under SIN 760 2, as well as other databases.

7. What types of book and pamphlets are covered under SIN 760 1?

Ranging from your basic electronic dictionary to geological maps and even children's books, SIN 760 1 is your one stop resource for books and pamphlets.
