

Brent Snyder

U.S. Department of Justice, Antitrust Division
San Francisco Field Office

In 1992, Brent Snyder graduated with Honors from the University of Texas School of Law, where he was an Associate Editor of the Texas Law Review. After completing a federal judicial clerkship, he began practicing as a private commercial litigator and became a partner of Perkins Coie, a large Seattle law firm, in 2001. During his years in private practice, Mr. Snyder focused on commercial and antitrust litigation and represented clients as diverse as Dennis Hopper, a Japanese trading company, fish processing companies, Chrysler Corporation, and the estate of the gangsta rapper, Eazy-E.

In 2003, Mr. Snyder began working as a Trial Attorney in the U.S. Department of Justice, Antitrust Division. In that position, Mr. Snyder investigates and prosecutes criminal antitrust and fraud violations and related crimes. Mr. Snyder has conducted several major international investigations and has been responsible for obtaining some of the Antitrust Division's largest criminal fines and longest jail sentences. For his work, Mr. Snyder has received numerous awards, including the Attorney General's Award for Distinguished Service, the Council of Inspectors General for Integrity and Efficiency Award of Excellence, and the Antitrust Division Award of Distinction.