ENFORCEMENT PROCEEDINGS

FORMER nVIDIA EMPLOYEE FINED $250,000 FOR INSIDER TRADING

Manu Shrivastava Traded after Learning of Contract to Supply Components for Microsoft X-Box

The Commission today announced that it has obtained a $250,000 insider-trading penalty against Manu B. Shrivastava, a former engineer for nVIDIA Corporation, a Santa Clara, California maker of computer graphics processors. Shrivastava engaged in illegal insider trading when he purchased nVIDIA call options after learning, in March 2000, that the company had just won a lucrative contract to provide graphics components for Microsoft Corporation's new video game console, the X-Box. The penalty was imposed in a December 5, 2001, order by the Honorable Charles R. Breyer, U.S. District Court for the Northern District of California.

Helene L. Morrison, District Administrator for the Commission's San Francisco District Office, said, "We're pleased that the court imposed such a substantial penalty. It should serve as a deterrent to others who would use confidential company information for their own benefit."

As described in the Commission's court filings, on Sunday, March 5, 2000, nVIDIA and Microsoft entered into an agreement providing for nVIDIA to design and manufacture the 3D computer graphics and multimedia sub-system for Microsoft's planned video game console, the X-Box. That evening, nVIDIA's president and chief executive officer sent an email entitled "X is Ours!" to all nVIDIA employees, informing them of the agreement and its huge revenue impact on nVIDIA. The next morning, March 6, nVIDIA's vice president of marketing sent an email to all nVIDIA employees entitled "xbox shhhhhh...", reminding them that news of the X-Box agreement was confidential.

On the morning of March 6, 2000, after reading both emails, Shrivastava began to acquire short-term nVIDIA call option contracts through an Internet brokerage account. In all, he spent $30,825 acquiring 100 nVIDIA option contracts.

From March 7 through March 9, 2000, nVIDIA's share price soared, as rumors about the X-Box contract circulated on the Internet and in the press. After Microsoft announced the X-Box agreement to the public on the morning of March 10, 2000, nVIDIA shares continued to rise, closing that day at $118 per share, more than twice the closing price on March 6. Shrivastava sold all 100 nVIDIA call option contracts between March 7 and March 10, realizing illegal profits of $446,724.

The Commission filed its lawsuit against Shrivastava on September 28, 2000. Also on that date, the U.S. Attorney for the Northern District of California filed criminal insider-trading charges against Shrivastava. In the criminal action, Shrivastava pled guilty to one count of securities fraud, forfeited his illegal profits of $446,724 plus his initial investment of $30,825, and was fined $20,000 and sentenced to one year of home detention and five years of probation. As a result of the December 5 court order in the Commission's action, Shrivastava must pay an additional civil penalty of $250,000.

In a related matter, on November 19, 2001, the Commission filed lawsuits against 15 other people for trading in nVIDIA securities in March 2000 prior to the public announcement of the X-Box contract. The actions allege that the defendants (including 11 nVIDIA employees and four tippees) earned more than $1.7 million in illegal profits. Simultaneous with the filing of the complaints, the Commission also announced settlements with two of the defendants. Litigation against the remaining defendants is pending. [SEC v. Manu B. Shrivastava, Civil Action No. C 00-04048 CRB, N.D. Cal.] (LR-17274)
