$36.27 RECORDED VOTE

A recorded vote by electronic device was ordered in the Committee of the Whole on the following amendment submitted by Mr. MARTINEZ:

At the end of title X, add the following:

Subtitle -Private Security Officers _1. SHORT TITLE. SEC.

This subtitle may be cited as the "Private Security Officers Quality Assurance Act of 1994''

SEC. _2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) Employment of private security officers in the United States is growing rapidly.

(2) The private security industry provides numerous opportunities for entry-level job applicants, including individuals suffering from unemployment due to economic conditions or dislocations.

(3) The American public is more likely to have contact with private security officers in the course of a day than with law enforcement officers.

(4) Juveniles in the United States, including those at risk of delinquency, are most likely to have their earliest contact with private security officers because of the significant presence of such officers in schools, shopping malls, and retail establishments.

(5) The American public demands the employment of qualified, well-trained private security officers.

(6) The States and employers should be required to determine the qualifications of applicants for employment as private security officers.

(7) Employers should be required to ensure at least minimum training for newly hired private security officers and refresher training for experienced private security officers, based on State-imposed standards.

(8) State requirements, if any, for screening and training private security officers vary widely.

(9) Public safety would be improved if all States required appropriate screening and training of private security officers. (10) States should enact laws imposing minimum standards that are uniform nationwide for the screening and training of private security officers.

(11) State law applicable to private security officers should apply to all private security personnel.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.
