Scope and Content Note

The papers of Stephen Bonsal (1865-1951) span the years 1890-1973, although the greater part of the material is dated 1900-1947. The papers consist of diaries, correspondence, subject files, articles and other writings, printed matter, and miscellaneous material. The bulk of the collection is in writings and articles files, which contain handwritten notes, typescripts, drafts, and clippings. Many of Bonsal's early writings were burned in a fire shortly after 1900. The collection is organized into eight series: Diaries, Special Correspondence, General Correspondence, Subject File, Writings File, Article File, Printed Material, and Miscellany.

Bonsal was best known as a foreign correspondent and author. In 1944, with the publication of the Pulitzer Prize winning Unfinished Business, his important role during the Paris Peace Conference in 1918-1919 became known. He had served as the confidential interpreter for President Woodrow Wilson and Colonel Edward Mandell House, sitting directly behind them and translating sentence by sentence. In addition, he kept a daily diary and at the president's request summarized the most important arguments and events. The diary and summaries became the basis for the book and its sequel, Suitors and Suppliants. Bonsal also took on important and highly confidential assignments for Colonel House in Europe, and at his behest secretly approached Senator Henry Cabot Lodge on a compromise over the Paris agreements.

Bonsal's diaries cover two major areas. There are two diaries and a notebook for the year 1895 when he was secretary of the American Legation at Tokyo. The notes refer to aspects of Japanese life including the theater, politics, pornography, the geishas, and relations with the United States. The diaries and notebooks relating to World War I and the Paris Peace Conference, 1918-1919. The entries range from brief notes to more extensive entries. As elsewhere, Bonsal's longhand notes are often difficult to read.

The papers also contain correspondence with many prominent individuals on a wide range of topics. Among the featured letter writers in the Special Correspondence series are James Stuart Douglas, Arthur Hugh Frazier, Francis Burton Harrison, Edward Mandell House, Hendrik Willem Van Loon, and Henry Lane Wilson. Correspondents in the General Correspondence include James Truslow Adams, Newton Diehl Baker, Bernard M. Baruch, and Hugh Gibson.

The letters from House cover the years 1917-1938 and include commentary on politics, literature, the Paris Peace Conference, the international situation, and various personalities. The relationship of the two men was close. In 1931 House wrote Bonsal, "You are one of the staunchest friends I have in all the world." Unfortunately, there are only a few copies of the letters that Bonsal sent to House.

The correspondence with Van Loon and his family covers a longer period of time. The Dutch-born American journalist and historian became close to Bonsal and his family. The letters portray his view of the events and personalities of his time, including his observations on President Franklin D. Roosevelt. In addition, there are numerous examples of his envelope artistry in the collection.

There are a number of items on Mexico in the collection. The Henry Lane Wilson correspondence, 1911-1926 (with one item from 1941), relates to the American ambassador's views on Mexico and his actions in regard to the Mexican revolution in which he played a part. Other material pertaining to Mexico in the Subject File and Article File series include the American-Mexican Joint Commission, 1916, and the Mexican Revolution, 1911-1916. The latter includes copies of cables to the New York Times from Mexico City in April and May of 1911 covering the fall and departure of President Porfirio Díaz, as well as additional correspondence and reports to the American Red Cross on Mexico in 1915. There is also typed material on views in Washington on the Mexican situation.

While in Paris in 1919 Bonsal became a friend of Georges Clemenceau. The Subject File includes material on the Frenchman's visit to the United States in November and December 1922, when Bonsal acted as a counselor and guide. Later he made several visits to Clemenceau in France. The file includes correspondence, clippings, drafts of articles, and miscellany.

Bonsal's role as a war correspondent is reflected in the Subject File under the headings Philippines, Balangiga and the Spanish-American War. The former includes his account of the 1911 massacre of an American unit, correspondence with survivors, reports, and material relating to the attempt thirty years later to give special recognition to the survivors. The material on the Spanish-American War relates to the Santiago campaign. It includes a typescript, field notebooks, photographic negatives, and letters from persons familiar with the events. The correspondence includes Joseph Wheeler's justification of his actions, Theodore Roosevelt's support of this position, and General Nelson A. Miles's criticisms.

The most extensive material in the Bonsal Papers is found in the Writings and Article File series. The Writing File consists of Bonsal's published and unpublished works, his Paris Peace Conference notes, and some unpublished short stories. Because of the often fragmentary nature of the material it is arranged on a chapter-by-chapter basis. The extensive longhand notes, particularly those relating to the Paris Peace Conference, are also fragmentary. Because of the difficulty in reading them they have been partially arranged into dated and undated categories or by subject of the notes.

The peace conference notes have also been arranged as typescript. Following the longhand notes they have been arranged chronologically. The notes and typescript that seemed clearly intended for use in Unfinished Business follow these. Because both Unfinished Business and Suitors and Suppliants assumed diary form in publication, the material is often identical to the peace conference typescript. There is, however, material that was not included in either book. Bonsal and others such as Arthur Hugh Frazier were often much more critical of Edith Bolling Galt Wilson and her role in Paris, for example, than they publicly acknowledged.

The Article File includes magazine and newspaper articles, published and unpublished, arranged chronologically. Bonsal's interview with Prince Otto Fürst von Bismarck in about 1890, although drawn from recollections after his notes were destroyed, affords an interesting view of Germany and Bismarck's personality and motivations. The articles clearly reflect Bonsal's catholic interests and extensive travels.
