

Domestic Policy Council - Ira Magaziner, Electronic Commerce

From the records of the Domestic Policy Council, Ira Magaziner's Electronic Commerce series covers policy considerations relating to internet and electronic commerce issues. Ira Magaziner served as Senior Advisor to the President for Policy Development from 1993 to 1998. Beginning in 1996, Magaziner headed up an initiative on global electronic commerce policy, resulting in the White House paper, A Framework for Global Electronic Commerce published July 1, 1997. The series includes drafts of the paper with solicited comments and input from various agencies and entities, both public and private. The files contain correspondence, reports, memos, and articles dealing with all aspects of internet issues, including copyright and intellectual property protection, encryption, domain names, and tariff and tax considerations on products sold via the internet. Magaziner and members of his staff traveled extensively throughout the world promoting the involvement of private/public partnerships in the industry of electronic commerce. The records include various travel itineraries and cables from around the world. The records contain correspondence and reports from various international organizations such as the World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO), the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD), and the Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI). The series also contains material relating to various conferences and meetings with industry leaders on the domestic front.
