

History of the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network

Protecting the U.S. and international financial systems by helping financial institutions serve customers, not criminals

“Our overall aim is to build a system to combat organized crime and white-collar crime and to deter and prevent the use of secret foreign bank accounts for tax fraud and their use to screen from view a wide variety of criminally related financial activities, and to conceal and cleanse criminal wealth.

“This administration recognizes the widespread moral decay that would result these practices are permitted to continue and expand. We are determined to do something about them.”

- 40th Anniversary of the BSA, 20th Anniversary of FinCEN

"FinCEN was created to be the bridge between law enforcement agencies and the financial industry. Our prescient designers saw the need for a central repository of financial intelligence that would collect, protect, and analyze the valuable information that industry could provide and then share it with law enforcement agencies, which at the time were holding several disparate and unconnected databases of their own. At the time a novel concept, the connections that FinCEN made, and the investigatory efficiency it provided, allowed users of the data to avoid duplicative efforts and to target their resources more effectively."
