As a consumer I should not have to "opt out" with a company. The company should be required to get my permission to share my information with anyone! The company states that it is a substantial financial burden to mail a notice annually. This burden could be eliminated with just one mailing to get the consumer's permission in written form to share their information with anyone. This request from the company should be in plain language. It is MY information which the company wants to share and make money on. The burden to share my information should be on the company not the other way around.

Thank You,
