Attention No. 2003-62

Do not waste a lot of time attempting to make yearly privacy notices easier to read and understand. Also, do not continue to burden those businesses that do not share financial data, but who are still required to give yearly notices. The solution is very simple. That is, simply do away with the opt-out notice and require those businesses that want to share our financial data, to first obtain our permission. In other words, require "opt-in", not "opt-out".
