

Evans, Sandra E

From: R Larkin [rwlarkin@hotmail.com]
Sent: Monday, March 29, 2004 12:20 PM
To: regs.comments@ots.treas.gov
Subject: Attn: # 2003-62 Privact info

14

Hi everyone,

In regards to the debate on how those who collect our financial data should better inform customers how to opt-out. I believe the focus is entirely wrong. I believe the vast majority of people DO NOT WANT their financial information shared with others and passed along JUST so someone else can potentially profit. The law SHOULD state that anyone possessing our financial information CANNOT legally share it with anyone WITHOUT THE EXPRESS CONSENT OF THAT PARTY!

Why should everyone have to be on the defensive from everyone who has our data? The burden to legally share our financial information should be on the shoulders of those desiring to share it, not upon the consumer. Let's make it to be by default illegal to share this unless they have permission. This seems like the right thing to do for millions of consumers.

Sincerely,

Russ Larkin
days 541.947.2972 x25
rwlarkin@hotmail.com

MSN Toolbar provides one-click access to Hotmail from any Web page - FREE download! <http://toolbar.msn.com/go/onm00200413ave/direct/01/>