IDA B. WELLS-BARNETT
Suffragist and civil rights crusader

Ida B. Wells-Barnett was a journalist, suffragist, advocate of racial justice, and anti-lynching activist. As co-founder of the Alpha Suffrage Club in Chicago, she traveled to Washington, DC, to march as a delegate from Illinois. She famously refused to comply when ordered to march at the back of the parade with other African Americans, and she marched with the Illinois delegation as she intended.

After the 1913 parade, Wells-Barnett helped to pass a suffrage bill in Illinois that gave women the right to vote in local and national elections. She then registered women voters
